Susan	Jan, are you doing 1 (you do) anything special now? If not,
	what about a short interview?
Jan	Fine 2 (I do) any more work
	today, so let's talk.
Susan	Well, Jan, you've finished, but with all that bad weather, you're badly behind schedule3 (that often happen)?
Jan	No,4 (it not happen) very much -
	at least, not this badly, thank goodness. But of course, 5 (things not usually go) exactly to plan, and6 (something often go) a bit wrong. So7 (I always add) a little extra time to the schedule.
Susan	But not four days!
Jan	No, and of course,8 (I think) about the next step now. I have to get back on schedule with other projects as well.
SUSAN	So when9 (you return) to London? Tomorrow?
Jan	Yes, 10 (we leave) early in the morning. And11 (we start) work on editing in the afternoon.
Susan	12 (you edit) the whole thing
	yourself?
JAN	No, 13 (I not usually do) much of the editing work these days. My assistant, Lucas, is very good.
	14 (he generally do) most of that part of our work.
SUSAN	15 (you start) another project
	immediately?
Jan	Several! And16 (I go) to a lunchtime meeting tomorrow to discuss the most important one. It's going to be a series of programmes about food around the world.
SUSAN	You certainly don't waste any time!

Organizing vocabulary

Read this introduction to a cookbook by the well-known food writer, Mark Henderson. What is his advice?

When we think of a country, we often think of its food before almost anything else. Take an example: Japan. Doesn't sushi come to mind just as soon as cars or kimonos? Or think of Britain. This time, it's fish and chips, isn't it? In other words, a nation's food can be as much a part of the national image as anything else. And that's because food is – or should be – a vital part of a national culture, just like its language and customs, and its arts and crafts.

When I visit a new holiday destination, I always take the chance to discover the local food. For me, this is the most interesting thing about travel. But then ... that's my job! And when I say local food, I don't mean the mass-produced, badly cooked frozen food that often goes with a package holiday in a popular holiday resort. Whatever the hotel restaurant menu says, the authentic heart of the national cuisine is certainly not here.

No, we have to take a break from the tourist areas. We have to take the time to explore the back streets and country towns and villages. We have to avoid places with menus in five languages and find the local people's cafés and family restaurants. There we can find real country cooking. There they cook with fresh, natural ingredients and with proper care and attention.

Every year, I try to explore the food culture of a different country, and I collect lots of traditional recipes. Here, I'm bringing together some of my favourites from around the world. They're all simple to make, and each offers the authentic taste of its own unique culture. Enjoy the journey!
